What Mint staffers are reading right now

These books that educate about racism, inequality and its repeated history in America are offering staffers a fresh perspective and a call to action. Here's what our Mint staffers—from our President and CEO Todd Herman to our archivist Ellen Show—have to say about them and why you should check them out them, too.

Curators' Picks

We are sharing pieces from our galleries and collections to help bring peace and inspiration while we all practice social distancing. Our curators have chosen these pieces to give you the museum experience from home. To see more #CuratorsPicks, follow us on our social media channels.

Wedgwood (Staffordshire, England, 1759–present). Mercury, 19th century, stoneware (black basalt). Collection of Lindsay Grigsby

Mercury. This bust of Mercury, the god of commerce in Roman mythology, is one of the most popular sculptures made at the Wedgwood factory. It is attributed to John Flaxman, Jr. (1755–1826), a talented modeler who worked for Wedgwood. Mercury is currently on view in Classic Black: The Basalt Sculpture of Wedgwood and His Contemporaries, at Mint Museum Randolph.
